MESSENGER BEATEN INTO INSENSIBILITY AND ROBBED

THUGS HOLD UP BOY

GET $3000

Highwaymen at North Attleboro Stand Off Crowd of People With Revolvers After Robbery and Finally Escape, but Money Was Recovered.

SPECIAL TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Aug. 22.—An armed posse of police and citizens is in hot pursuit, through the woods of this town, of three thugs who held up and robbed Arthur Greene of $3,000 just before noon to-day. Almost cornered for a few minutes, the robbers held the crowd of pursuers at bay with guns until they were able to cover their retreat into the woods.

The hold-up took place on Broadway, one of the main streets of this place, and was one of the boldest ever perpetrated in these parts. The men had evidently been keeping watch on Greene for some time past, and were familiar with his work and route.

Greene is employed by the G. K. Webster Company, silversmiths. He had been to the Jewelers' National Bank for the pay money, and was returning with it in a strong bag.

As he rode along Broadway on his bicycle the men sprang in front of him.

One of them covered Greene with a revolver, while another snatched the cash bag from his hands. The third struck him over the head with a blackjack. The boy fell to the street.

Greene was stunned for a short time, but finally managed to rise to his feet and run, crying for help. Attracted by the cries E. J. Cooney, a BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent, rushed from the Telephone building on Broadway. Green told him of the hold-up.

Seeing the three men running across the lawn of H. S. Barrows, a millionaire jeweler, Cooney set out in chase, calling upon some men he knew to help him. In the chase Cooney saw one of the thieves drop the cash bag in a thick hedge. He stopped and took charge of the money. The other men continued.

"There were three men standing on the sidewalk at this time," Cooney called on them to help him capture the thieves. The four pursued the fugitives and soon they were joined by a number of others in a mad chase down Washington street.

The robbers, meanwhile, halted, and pulling revolvers, took a stand in the middle of the road. None of the persons was armed, and knowing the desperate character of the highwaymen they stopped, waiting for reinforcements.

CAR USED IN THE CHASE.

The things resumed their flight. An electric car, which happened along, was then called into requisition. The conductor ordered the motorman to put on full speed. No one on the car had a revolver. On the street went the chase. The car was rapidly overhauling the fugitives when they jumped over a fence and cut across lots. They rushed on to the railroad tracks and disappeared around a curve. When last seen they were heading toward Pawtucket.

Deputy Sheriff Brown, who had been notified, soon had the entire police force of North Attleboro after the fugitives. Meanwhile a posse had been organized at the Webster factory. A score of men, most of them armed, started down the tracks after the men. The police telephoned to Pawtucket, Central Falls, Valley Falls, Lonsdale and Cumberland, asking the officers there to search for, and, if possible, apprehend the thugs. Arrests are expected soon.

Insurance Dragnet Out to Put an End to GRAVEYARD FRAUDS

Mrs. Mary Tennyson, Woman Against Whom Insurance Company Prefers Charges.

Two Big Companies Pool Issues in Fighting Gang, and Sensations Are Promised.

After an exchange of confidences, based on startling reports from their respective detective bureaus, two of the big life insurance companies have pooled issues in an endeavor to round up and bring to justice a daring band of insurance fraud operators, who, they assert, are making Massachusetts, and particularly Boston, their harvest field.

Although a haze of official reticence has purposely been thrown about the details of the campaign, the BOSTON AMERICAN learns from an authoritative source that scores of suspicious cases, which on investigation proved to be fraudulent, are being quietly watched and "cursed" by the companies with a view to delaying arrests until responsibility for alleged crimes and irregularities have been positively fixed on the parties "higher up."

In at least one case, according to a high official of one of the companies, the conspirators will be called upon to answer a charge more serious than swindling. In fact a demand will be made for the exhumation of a body recently buried.

A Jungle of Sensation.

"Our detectives in this city have been at work for the last three months on many specific cases, including the Tennyson-Griffis-Nelson case," said the BOSTON AMERICAN'S informant. "Their reports have convinced us that Boston is fast becoming the popular centre of an old game that has been worked to death in New York and other large cities—the game where somebody gets a dying man or woman to apply for a policy, but has a healthy substitute take the physical examination in the applicant's name."

Ex-Senator W. A. Morse, Boston attorney for the New York Life, who appeared in the Municipal Court yesterday to prosecute the charges against Mrs. Mary A. Tenny-

CUBAN REBELS UNDER GUERRA WIN SKIRMISH IN PINAR DEL RIO

AWAIT REINFORCEMENTS BEFORE MAKING ATTACK ON THE CITY ITSELF.

HAVANA, Aug. 22.—The rebel forces are reported to have scored their first victory shortly before daylight to-day when a force under Pino Guerra attacked the rurales outpost at Pinar del Rio and drove them back toward the city.

The insurgents did not follow up their advantage, as they are reported to be awaiting reinforcements, but a concentrated attack on the small force of loyal troops at Pinar del Rio is expected at any hour. Aid is being rushed the government forces from Havana.

The threatened cabinet crisis has added to the burdens of the government. Dealwishes among the cabinet members have caused friction, and the retirement of several of the ministers is expected.

Every effort is being made to patch up the differences, however, and the government authorities refuse to admit there has been any trouble in the cabinet.

Danger in Pinar del Rio.

The greatest danger to the government is threatened at Pinar del Rio. Pino Guerra is encamped within three miles of the city and may march upon the place at any moment. Revolutionists boasted that the city would be taken last night, but no report has been received of any movement against the town.

The position of the government is growing more serious all the time. It is generally admitted that President Palma must act quickly in crushing the revolution or the insurgents will be able to entrench themselves too strongly in the mountains of Pinar del Rio province for the government forces to root them. All efforts so far, however, to get a force equal to that of the insurgents to Pinar del Rio city have failed.

To add to the troubles of the government uprisings have occurred in other provinces. Insurgent bands are reported in Havana, Matanzas and Santa Clara provinces. The dissatisfaction with the government is widespread and recruits are flocking to the rebel leaders.

Rebels in Strong Position.

The revolutionists have shown marked acumen in selecting the province of Pinar del Rio to establish themselves. A range of mountains traverses the province for a distance of 100 miles. Within its fastnesses the revolutionists may entrench themselves so securely that a large army will be needed to dislodge them. The entire forces of Spain found it impossible to drive out the Cuban patriots from these mountains during the continuous warfare maintained in Cuba previous to the interference by the United States in the war for freedom there. That the little republic of Cuba will be able to raise an army which can accomplish what Spain's 200,000 men failed to do is incredible.

The men who are now leading the revolutionists are the men who led the Cuban bands against Spain. They know the mountains thoroughly and can easily defend themselves in their old strongholds.

But the revolutionists need a capital in order to give prestige to their cause. Pinar del Rio city has been selected by them as that capital. That they will make an attempt to seize the city is considered certain. With the force at his command, it is believed Guerra can take the city. The government will defend its position, however, and a fight may be expected. It is believed this battle will come soon.

TWO INFLUENTIAL LEADERS.

With Guerra's band is ex-Governor Loit Perez of Pinar del Rio Province, and a Catholic priest, San Juan Martinez, who has great influence with Guerra's followers. The presence of these men in the

MORE 'QUAKES AND BIG FIRES IN VALPARAISO

LONDON, Aug. 22.—A recurrence of large fires at Valparaiso, Chili, is announced in a private message received by Huth & Company to-day.

The dispatch adds that earthquake shocks continue.

No information is given in the message of the extent of the fires or how much additional damage has been wrought by the flames in the city which suffered so heavily in the earthquake and subsequent conflagrations of last Thursday.

VALPARAISO, Aug. 22.—More complete reports are now being received in regard to the damage done throughout Chili by the earthquake and these tend to reduce the first estimates of the loss.

It is now believed that $50,000,000 or $60,000,000 will cover the entire loss. Two thousand is still given as the number of deaths caused by the disaster. The provinces of Valparaiso and Aconcagua suffered the most severely.

The greater part of the financial loss was sustained by the City of Valparaiso. The fires which broke out following the earthquake and raged unchecked for several days were responsible for much of the destruction of property.

CRISIS IN THE CABINET

rebel camp is drawing many men through the province to Guerra's standard.

The revolutionists are well armed and are supplied with dynamite. Seventy men working on the government road at Pasa Real joined the insurrectionists yesterday and took with them a quantity of dynamite and fuses. What use the rebels will make of the explosive remains to be seen.

The trouble in the cabinet is giving the government great concern, despite the official denials that have been made of any cabinet crisis. The selection of Secretary of Works Montalvo by President Palma to head the government forces at once aroused Secretary of Justice O'Farrill, who is also acting Secretary of the Interior. He declined to agree to a division of authority in the Interior Department, and is said to have offered his resignation. Secretary of Agriculture Cassus was similarly inclined. To placate these officials the appointment of Montalvo was withdrawn.

Even then the offended Cabinet members were inclined to leave the ministry. The greatest pressure was brought to bear upon them by influential Moderates before they yielded. To have a split in the Cabinet at this juncture would probably deal a death blow to the government. Palma and friends realize this and hence made the overture to the disgruntled Cabinet officers in their positions.

Takes Energetic Action.

Laboring under the disadvantage of its numerous difficulties the government has acted as quickly and energetically as it can to quell the revolution.

Arrests of suspected revolutionists have been made in every province. It is estimated that 1,000 men have been taken in custody. The asserting in of governing the recruits is progressing everywhere. Troops are being hurried to the danger points.

But the revolution has outpaced the government. More terrific action is feared by the rebels than to the rural guards. The arrest of suspected persons in the various provinces has driven revolutionists to form bands and openly oppose the government. A signal victory for the revolutionists in capturing Pinar del Rio will swell the ranks of the rebel army by hundreds.

The government, however, hopes to deal a hard blow at the revolutionists to-day. The band of General Banderas is said to have been trapped between two government forces near Hoyo Colorado in Havana province. The escape of the insurgent leader is impossible, according to government officials. They assert that Banderas will be captured or killed within a few hours. The government also expresses confidence in being able to hold Pinar del Rio.

STENSLAND ARRESTED IN MEXICO?

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Paul O. Stensland, fugitive bank looter, is said to be under arrest at Aguas Calientes, Mexico, and Chicago police are in communication with the Mexican authorities to establish the identity of the prisoner. The name of the town, translated, is "Hot Waters."

A private message received here brought the first news of the arrest. A telegram was at once sent to Springfield to ascertain whether Governor Deneen had been notified and what action had been taken looking to the extradition of the fugitive.

It was learned that a telegram, similar to one sent to this city, has been received by the Governor and is now in the hands of his secretary.

Payment by Receiver Pfizer of a dividend of 20 per cent to the bank's depositors, ordered by Judge Bentham, will begin at 9 o'clock Friday morning. Preparations for making the payments as expeditiously as possible have been completed by Mr. Pfizer. He has arranged for an ample force of police.

The man with $1 on deposit will be afforded the same opportunity to draw out 20 cents as the man with thousands. To avoid any suggestion of favoritism Mr. Pfizer has determined to pay the claims in the principle of first come first served, and notices to the 22,000 depositors will be mailed simultaneously.

son and her brother, Dennis Griffin, both of No. 268 Commercial street, and Thomas Nelson, sailor, at present supposed to be at sea, says that the investigation of the Tennyson-Griffin-Nelson case led the investigators into a veritable jungle of speculation, where the greed of the living traded on the dying and the dead.

"As a matter of fact," added Mr. Moore, significantly, "we have unearthed a few surprises, which for the present at any rate we would prefer to keep to ourselves."

Make Serious Charge.

In the official complaint filed by Albert J. Pickford, an inspector and detective of the New York Life, Thomas Nelson, the missing sailor, is charged with forging and with having impersonated Dennis Griffin, "present collector," on May 1 last, in applying for a life insurance policy which called for a death benefit of $2,000.

Mrs. Tennyson and her brother, in the quaint language of the law, are charged with having been accessories before and after the alleged crime in that "they did counsel, hire and procure said Nelson to commit said felony and forgery, did then and there knowingly harbor, receive, conceal and assist, with intent that said Nelson should avoid and escape detention, arrest, trial and punishment, said Nelson not standing in the relation of husband or wife, parent or son, child or grandchild, or brother or sister by consanguinity, affinity or adoption to said Tennyson or said Griffin."

At the time the application for the $3,000 policy was made, Nelson boarded with Mrs. Tennyson. He was an able-bodied seaman. Griffin, on the other hand, was a hopeless consumptive, so the insurance company declares.

BLIND AND HALT CURED AT SHRINE OF STE. ANNE

Pilgrims Marvel at Restoration to Health of Four of Their Number.

Party in Charge of Father McCafferty Returning to Boston.

Rejoicing over the miraculous restoration to health of four of their number, 350 awestruck and happy pilgrims, including many of the congregation of St. Thomas' Roman Catholic church of Jamaica Plain, in charge of Rev. Father McCafferty, are to-day on route to Boston from Ste. Anne de Beaupre's shrine. They will arrive at the North Station to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The pilgrims arrived in Quebec at noon yesterday from the shrine, and three hours later they sailed up the St. Lawrence River bound for Montreal on their homeward journey. When Rev. Father McCafferty and his fellowers arrived in Quebec they hesitated to talk of the wonders which were wrought at St. Anne de Shrine.

Four of the pilgrims, who a few days ago were carried there afflicted, are to-day reported to be cured of their infirmities. They are:

Joseph Baldwin, aged nineteen years, of No. 14 Etna place, Lynn, who had been born blind.

Boy's Sight Restored.

Michael Kelly of No. 37 Goldsmith street, Jamaica Plain, who for twenty years has been a cripple.

Miss Anna F. Morley of Brighton, for years a victim of hip disease.

A pilgrim, name unknown, who was a hopeless sufferer from paralysis.

While the pilgrims were devoutly praying before the shrine in the basilica of Ste. Anne the blind boy, Joseph Baldwin, grouping in physical darkness, was offering special devotions for the sight which had been denied him from his birth. Suddenly he began to shout with joy, then he laughed and cried by turns as the wondrous sight of the beautiful shrine was revealed to his eyes.

A wonderful feeling of awe swept over the worshippers as a priest announced to the Boston pilgrims that sight had come in answer to prayers to Joseph Baldwin, one of their number. It was the first time to be announced to the pilgrims from Boston.

Threw Her Crutches Away.

All day Sunday and Monday had the 350 pilgrims prayed and attended different services in the beautiful shrine of Ste. Anne. It was during the final pilgrims' high mass, which was celebrated yesterday, that the miracles were wrought. All partaken of, that the miracles were wrought.

Almost immediately following the announcement of the cure of young Baldwin, Michael Kelly, who had been a cripple for twenty years, felt that his prayers were answered, that he was a whole man again. Hardly able to believe that what he felt was true, the man arose tremblingly to his feet. There was no pain, his limbs were sound and free, his crooked back was straight. He walked to the other end of his pew and then with a loud cry of thankfulness he prostrated himself before the shrine.

Made Well in An Instant.

The returning pilgrims report another strange case of a man who had been a hopeless cripple for many years. He could scarcely enter the church, and followed the different devotions and processions with the utmost difficulty. While the cures were being wrought, it is said that this man was restored to perfect health in an instant. So rejoiced was he, almost made mad for very joy, that he rushed from the church so that his name was not learned.

In addition to these four distinct and remarkable cures, or miracles, which were wrought in the presence of Rev. Father Shrine, the pilgrims tell of several other persons who had been suffering from lesser ailments and which they say were obliterated during the last mass in the basilica.

One is that of Miss Scott of Monatt street, Roxbury, who experienced relief from a chronic ailment. Another is that of a woman, whose name was not learned, who was a sufferer from heart disease and other complications. She was cured and left the church with thanksgiving.

Conductors will not be permitted to change a bill higher than $2, and the person presenting one of any greater denomination hereafter will be asked to leave the car.

Prickly Heat Humors Hives Brown Tail

Mrs. W. R. Wattman, 40 Shawmut avenue, New Bedford, Mass., says: "For nearly six months I suffered intensely with an itching of my head and face, arms and back. I had three different doctors and tried all kinds of salves and ointments, besides taking medicine, but received no relief. The itching seemed unbearable. Only once did I get a night's rest, and that might help me, I suppose. It's a little to me for me to say enough relief at once. I was wonderful, and I could not be without it." "Perhaps people may wonder why I am so enthusiastic over what folks call 'prize fighting.' In the first place, I believe it is a manly sport, and I know it is not half as dangerous as we are led to believe."—Mrs. "Matty" Baldwin to Boston American after fight.

FIGHTER'S BRIDE HEARS NEWS OF CONTEST BY AMERICAN WIRE

MRS. "MATTY" BALDWIN RECEIVING THE NEWS OF HER HUSBAND'S FIGHT

Photographs by Boston American Staff Photographer.

"I know there isn't a man in the world that can best my husband."

—Mrs. Baldwin as news of the fight was sent to her.

Looked for Victory, but Comforted by Realizing That Though He Didn't Win He Didn't Lose.

Matty Baldwin's bride of six days heard the returns of the contest between her husband and Dave Deshler in Beachmont Inn last night from a special wire engaged by the BOSTON AMERICAN. Far more than an athletic contest in which the man she loves could win fame was this event. It was his first encounter since they had been married and she seemed to look upon the outcome of the fray as a harbinger of future prosperity and joy.

A little brown-haired girl, athletic, vivacious, yet unassuming, is Mrs. Matty Baldwin, and as she sat and listened to the details of the fight, by little false starts, ways, with here and there a word, she seemed trying to send messages of cheer to her husband, who was fighting the one great battle of his life in the ring at the Lincoln Club in Chelsea. With each of the returns, varying as they did from the favor of one of the contestants to the other, she expressed softly a hope, and when the final result came she only turned away for a moment, saying: "Oh, how I had hoped he would win. But there, I feel lots of comfort in realizing that though he did not win he did not lose."

Mrs. Baldwin is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lake Mullen of Foster court, Charlestown. Two years ago she met Matty Baldwin. A strong friendship was formed. Later an engagement was announced and on Wednesday they were married in the presence of a few close friends and relatives. Since the wedding she has resided at Hillside cottage, on Endicott avenue, Beachmont, and here she watched her husband train.

Joyous When News Was Good.

Shortly after 9 o'clock, she heard the first returns from the fight. When she learned that the men were in the ring the pent-up nervousness seemed to be more apparent; it was then that she showed the spirit of the wife and if ever there was, she said, "Matty has fought many times since we were engaged, but I never felt so connected as now."

When the news came that Deshler had fallen under the heavy battling of Baldwin during the sixth round Mrs. Baldwin became excited. "Baldwin knocked Deshler to his knees with a hard body blow," came the bulletin. Mrs. Matty clapped her hands, exclaiming, "He is winning! I know he'll win." Then again in the twelfth round, when it was apparent that the Cambridge fighter was groggy and was distressed under the rapid onslaught of Baldwin, she announced her renewed hope, feeling that triumph was her husband's and hers. It was during these periods that she talked more of the ring and its boxing contests. At those times she became excited, because she thought she saw victory within easy reach.

One after another the events of the rounds of fighting were told her. At times she smiled and said: "Oh, I know he'll win! Matty will win this fight. Each of us would rather that victory would be his to-night than all the next fair dozen."

Sometimes Was Anxious.

Announcements of the cleverness displayed by Deshler brought forth only the for more news.

After the reports of the first seven rounds had been received and the worry was very apparent on the young wife's face, she turned to the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter pleading for his opinion and begging to know if there was a possibility of Matty Baldwin losing the fight.

When the news came that her husband was forging ahead and seemed to be gaining on Deshler, her eyes brightened and she whispered to those about her, "Good! good!" As the contest neared the finish the excitement became even more intense. Mrs. Baldwin became more nervous under the strain, but she stoutly declared that she felt that the winner's name was Baldwin. When at last the result came she seemed disappointed at first, then she smiled and directed all her inquiries regarding the condition of her husband. She was very anxious to know if he had been hurt in any way, and when he would receive his friends. Then she turned to and then eagerly she held her attention turn to her, so that she might say as she otherwise would have been mine."

had planned in case of any unfavorable result. "Well, Matty, you can; you can, every day."

And so fondly hoped that this first match would result in a victory," said Mrs. Baldwin. "I had thought of it as much since we were married and I believed that the result of this night's event would mean much for our future. But, of course, he didn't get beaten. I don't think there is a man in the world that can beat my husband. I know there isn't. I know it, I say."

When we parted last Saturday I knew that Matty would not return to me defeated and he will not. Perhaps people may wonder why I confess so much, over what folks call prize-fighting. Well, in the first place, I believe it is a manly sport and I know it is not half as dangerous as we are led to believe.

"I want to thank the BOSTON AMERICAN for the help it has been to me in this important event. I feel as if I had almost seen the argument with my own eyes. The details here been very thoroughly explained to me, and I believe heartily that I have been saved from much worry than

M'CULLOUGH MAKES REPLY ON LIGHTING

Councilman from Ward 12 Defends Himself Against McGrath's Accusations.

HIS POSITION UNCHANGED

In reply to a letter to the BOSTON AMERICAN, published in which Councilman McGrath of Ward 12 said that it was the absence of Councilmen Linehan and Councilman M... prevented action by the municipal lighting of its report, Councilman McCullough writes the following as follows:

McGrath, in substance ... notice that the absence of Aldermen Linehan and I at the last meeting of the committee on Public Lighting, appointed for the consideration of the petition of ex Mayor Quincy and a superintendent of Lamps Donovan, to which were to give testimony ... made by them on behalf of ... with the Edison Electric Lighting ...

With this ridiculous ... hypothesis, McGrath then ... that Alderman Linehan ... been reached by "parties ... have been seduced into a ... upon the question of ... light plants.

Were at Meeting Place.

"As a matter of fact, Alderman Linehan and I were at the meeting of the committee shortly after the ... for the meeting and were much disappointed to learn that the committee ... without quorum. There ... been on this committee and absents to charge two members who ... delayed a few moments and ... appearing on time, with the ... of no quorum, and it is ... to say that the same two members of the committee were responsible for the ... appearance of ex Mayor Quincy and Mr. Donovan, since the chairman of ... committee has full power to summon ...

"However, the questioning of ex Mayor Quincy or Mr. Donovan is of comparatively small importance in view of the great public question which this committee has under consideration. The only duty ... submitting to the voters of Boston the question of public ownership of gas and electric lighting as provided in Chapter 54 of the Revised Laws.

"Voted Contrary to Pledge."

"The Municipal Ownership League formed in response to a popular demand interviewed all candidates for the Common Council last Fall and asked them if they would vote, if elected, for the submission to the voters of Boston the question of public ownership of gas and electric lighting. McGrath pledged himself to vote for this proposition, and was elected upon this pledge.

"I had the honor of introducing in the Common Council the order providing for the submission of this question to the people. The order called for a vote at the coming law. Councilman McGrath, notwithstanding his pledge to the people, voted against the order. In other faith with their constituencies, and evidently to the powerful force of vested influences ... against the people's will. If Councilman McGrath and his co-conspirators had kept their pledges, Boston to-day would undoubtedly be furnishing its own light on a ... suit, labor would be better paid and the people would be spending the money which is ... still flowing into the coffers of the gas and electric light Trust for playgrounds for our children, baths, better streets and sewers, improved hospital accommodations and the woefully needed sanitary projects.

Position Unchanged.

"Out of the fourteen members on the committee, Mr. Linehan and myself were the only ones who voted in favor of submitting the question of public ownership of lighting plants to the people.

"McGrath has insinuated that Alderman Linehan and I have changed our position on the Lighting question. In order that there may be no doubt as to just what our position is, I now state both for myself and Alderman Linehan that we are unalterably in favor of public ownership of lighting and that we will use every means at our command to submit, at this very necessary and important condition, all forces and potent influences to the contrary notwithstanding."

LEO F. McCULLOUGH,
"Councilman, Ward 12."

EACH GIRL WEDDED THE OTHER'S BROTHER AND WEDDED ON THE SLY

Each Couple in Turn Runs Away to the Parson While the Other Couple Isn't Looking.

MRS CARRIE MAY KEOUGH — MRS GRACE E BLAICHFORD

BRIDES WHO EACH WED OTHER'S BROTHER.

Some people with but a single thought, and that a thought that is not new, would have that kept to themselves.

Today William Denton Blatchford, a young Cambridge druggist, and his wife, who was Miss Grace Denston Keough, one of Cambridge are receiving the congratulations of their friends upon their marriage, which took place in Trenton, N. J., last Saturday, under most romantic and unusual circumstances.

Today the friends of William Frederick Keough, brother of Miss Blatchford, and his wife, who was until Saturday Miss Carrie May Blatchford, are eagerly awaiting their return from Trenton, where they journeyed for their wedding to visit friends.

Last week the Keoughs, brother and sister, and the Blatchfords, brother and sister, long inseparable, left, as they told their families and friends, for a little visit to friends in Trenton.

Now Mr. Keough, whose home is at No. 100 Ellery street, Cambridge, had long been smitten upon Miss Blatchford, whose home is at No. 103, Baldwin street, Cambridge, next door to Mr. Keough brother's drug store. Miss Keough, the young druggist had told many times of the charms of the Keoughs to see the pretty young daughter of the family. The two young men were also good friends and so were the young women. Cupid never had such a holiday in his long life apparently.

Spied Her Gold Ring.

The quartet went to Trenton last week. Each couple intended to be married, but the intention was kept a profound secret from the other couple and from their Jersey friends.

Saturday afternoon Mr. Keough, who is a prosperous young business man of Cambridge, sallied out with Miss Blatchford, leaving his sister with Mr. Blatchford and their friends. Not long afterwards they returned. The quick eye of Miss Keough spied a glistening gold wedding ring on Miss Blatchford's finger.

Tipping the wink to Mr. Blatchford, they too, in their turn, decamped. When they returned, instead of their being four of a party as they had been when two journeyed to Trenton, there were but two. The wedding rings on the brides' fingers told the story.

Explanations followed and then the inseparable Jerseys friends feted them. Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Blatchford came home. Then the story was told both families and when the Keoughs come home feasting will be the order of the day in the two family circles, which have been so strangely and romantically brought together by the double marriage de

Could Play Same Game.

Mr Blatchford at his drug store laughingly told the whole story to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter "My wife and I had intended to be married in Trenton, but we did not want any one to know of it. Keough to know of it. They had formed exactly the same purpose and they let us out.

"They were married early Saturday afternoon. When they came home they made no declarations and smiling that we were surprised that they had played same trick and then Keough's sister, who is now my wife, spied the ring on my sister's finger.

"That was enough. They ran play at that game." I whispered to Miss Keough and out we went and were married in less than two hours after the first ceremony took place. Of course we had all intended to be married and it was generally known, but the idea of the sudden marriages in Jersey came when we decided upon the trip to visit our friends."

TARIFF GRAFT IS AS BAD AS ANY, SAYS FOSS

Reciprocity Advocate Declares Roosevelt Has Not Sized Up Situation Right.

BAY STATE IS TOO MEEK

Eugene N. Foss, candidate for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor, says there is not much in that section of the recent letter of President Roosevelt relating to the tariff that is calculated to exhilarate the friends of reciprocity.

He does not think he President properly senses the tariff situation, and declares that the Republican party has fallen into the habit of considering the producer and ignoring the consumer; that, while the tariff has increased the price of living, the price of labor has stood still, and that the Republican party is taking its life in its hands when it ignores the people as it has been doing.

Foss insists that no statement from Roosevelt can nullify the cardinal principle of reciprocity.

Bay State Tariff is Graft.

"Massachusetts tariff graft is just as bad as any other tariff graft, and these wool and woolen duties in this trying and changeable climate, are among the worst and most indefensible of our tariff bulwarks," he says. "That the people have them so uncomplainingly is because they do not know the facts. If the argument is made that those extortionate wool duties are levied in the interest of labor, I say as a manufacturer, that I am not yet convinced that adding 50 per cent to the cost of my raw material will result in my paying higher wages to my men."

Foss emphatically holds that the present tariff fosters and nurses and promotes trusts and monopolies.

Trusts Dominate Legislation.

He charges that the great trusts of the country have dominated the floor legislation at Washington and that the House Market club has misrepresented conditions in Massachusetts to President Roosevelt.

"Massachusetts always has led in the councils of the nation, and an expression from Massachusetts will have greater effect than from almost any other state in the union," declares Foss. "The State machine, under its present leadership, has restricted the rightful influence of Massachusetts in the councils of the nation from the fact that her leaders have been subservient to the over-protected interests of the country. While Massachusetts ought to have led and made herself felt, she has meekly followed."

CONGRESSMEN ON RECORD IN LABOR'S BATTLE

Gompers to Publish Replies to Workers' Bill of Grievances With His Comments.

MANY EVADE THE ISSUES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—In the forthcoming number of The American Federationist President Gompers will publish, with editorial comment, the replies of several congressmen to the circular letter of the American Federation of Labor inquiring as to their attitude on the questions discussed in labor's bill of grievances, which was presented to President Roosevelt, the president pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of the last session of Congress.

Introducing the replies President Gompers says, in part:

"In the bill of grievances we appealed to those responsible for legislation or for the failure to enact legislation to accord the hope that the appeal would not be in vain, and added that if perchance Congress did not heed labor's request, the toilers would appeal to the conscience and support of our fellow citizens. Submitting to the election of its vested and responsible leaders, Congress utterly failed to accord the rights or grant any relief requested.

Protest Quickly Voiced.

"The indignation felt among the wage earners and the people generally of our country at this flagrant disregard of their liberties and their interests made itself promptly and spontaneously manifested in all sections of the country and from all quarters came inquiries from their respective constituencies regarding the attitude of certain congressmen.

"In certain respect the replies speak for themselves. There will be little difficulty in ranging some of them under the heads of 'unfriendly,' 'negligent' or 'hostile,' while others are clearly non-committal and evasive in their tone. One of the most reprehensible things is the lack of knowledge and the lack of sympathy demonstrated by some of the replies.

"All will understand that he who is not with us is against us."

Hearty Support from Griggs.

The first letter in the list to be published is that from Representative J. M. Griggs, chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee. It says:

"I have carefully read the list of labor's grievances and I think I understand same. I agree fully with you in every demand therein made.

"In the above letter Mr. Gompers makes the following editorial comment:

"Mr. Griggs' answer is brief, but unqualifiedly in approval of labor's bill of grievances."

WOODCHUCK PULLS TRIGGER; BOY SHOT

WATERBURY, Ct., Aug. 22.—Shot by a woodchuck is the strange but painful experience of George Adams, who is lying at the residence of Clifford Barnum, near Middlebury, suffering from a bullet wound in the stomach. MURPHY MAY BE FOR HEARST, BUT HEARST IS NOT FOR MURPHY

League Leader Declares He Has No Interest in Tammany Factional Disputes.

Is Also Opposed to "the Ryans and Belmonts and Their Jeromes."

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—There were three developments of importance and interest in the local political situation yesterday.

Charles F. Murphy came out in a statement in which he clearly intimated that Tammany Hall's sentiment favored William R. Hearst for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Mr. Hearst issued a statement in which he reiterates his opposition to political bosses and paid puppets in office, "who serve their corporation masters slavishly and shamelessly to their own loss of office and only develop a semi-sense of decency and a pretended regard for the people when an election is impending."

District Attorney Jerome also issued a statement, containing a large amount of abuse for Mr. Hearst and Mr. Murphy. Mr. Jerome, however, carefully avoided all mention of Hearst and Belmont and his other corporate backers, and of the fact that, as a principle in the support of his candidates, are the names of many of the most notorious corporation supporters of the city council.

Mr. Jerome evidently has a vivid recollection that both Mr. Hearst and Mr. Murphy have endorsed him in preference to Mr. Hearst's statement does not intimate that this was due to his efficiency in enforcing the laws particularly against his friends in the Ryan-Belmont syndicate.

To Influence Primaries.

Mr. Hearst's statement follows:

"I have no interest whatever in the factional disputes of Tammany Hall. These declarations for or against me are nothing more than attempts to influence votes in primary contests.

"Over three months ago I gave an interview to the Brooklyn Eagle defining my position, which I have not altered.

I said: "McCarren may be for me, as reported, but I am not for McCarren. I regard him strictly as a corporation representative, and not as a Democrat. I understand his motive in giving the impression that he is for me. They are wholly selfish. McCarren believes that I may have the elements of strength with the people, and he hopes to profit by it through having it appear that he favors my nomination for some office.

"I don't mind saying that it will be a mighty good thing for both Murphy and McCarren to be 'for me' if I am declared elected as Mayor. It is absurd to talk of a combination between those men and myself. I have not sought their support in any way, and never shall do so."

I repeat now that I am absolutely and unalterably opposed to the Murphys and the McCarrens, and also to the Sullivans and the Mechlins, and to the kind of politics that they all represent.

I am opposed to boss rule in politics.

I am opposed to corporation control of parties through machines, and the fact that a boss or a machine declares for me does not alter my attitude in any particular. I am also opposed to the Ryans and Belmonts and their Jeromes in politics, to the corrupt use of wealth to debauch the ballot, and to the purchase of puppets in office.

I am opposed to those paid puppets in office who serve their corporation masters slavishly and shamelessly to their own loss of office and only develop a semi-sense of decency and a pretended regard for the people when an election is impending.

The country needs a genuine independent movement, because the old parties are infected with the vermin of bosses, the corruptionists and rascals in office, who merely supply weak virile righteousness while the dollars of their corporation masters are jingling in their pockets.

Mr. Roosevelt says the people need a "square deal." I would add that to have a SQUARE deal they must have a NEW deal, for nearly all the cards in the old political packs are marked by the corporations, and dirty and dog-eared from the corrupt uses to which they have been put.

Opposed to Paid Puppets of Corporation Masters

I am opposed to corporation control of parties through machines, and the fact that a boss or a machine declares for me does not alter my attitude in any particular. I am also opposed to the Ryans and Belmonts and their Jeromes, in politics, to the corrupt use of wealth to debauch the ballot, and to the purchase of puppets in office.

The country needs a purifying, independent movement, because the old parties are infected with the vermin of bosses, the corruptionists and rascals in office, who merely supply weak virile righteousness while the dollars of their corporation masters are jingling in their pockets.

From statement of William R. Hearst.

$25,000 FINES TRUSTS ADMITS ADULTERATIONS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—Surrender all along the line was announced yesterday by the Corn Products Company, the glucose annex of the Standard Oil company, in a conference concerning the prosecutions brought against the agents of the corporation and against early makers for the sale of adulterated sweets.

The Corn Products Company does a business of $8,000,000 a year. The surrender means that more than 8,000 barrels of dosed glucose must be taken out of the city, and that the trust will pay more than $25,000 in fines.

The surrender was announced of E. J. Buckley, representing the glucose trust, at a meeting in the office of U. G. Gallenkamp, attorney for the State Dairy and Food Commission. Dr. R. H. Warren, State dairy and food commissioner, who directed the prosecutions, and H. C. Cassidy, the agent who worked up the cases, were present.

In brief, the Corn Products Company admitted that the glucose sold by it to the candy, jam, preserves, pie fillings and molasses trade in Pennsylvania contains sulphur dioxide. It offers to pay fines for all its customers who have been arrested and declares that it will not be sour of the poisonous adulterant in its products.

WILD TEAPOT TEMPEST OVER MISERY ISLAND

COTTAGER HELD THE FORT

Miss Connelley says none in her party were insulting, and Mr. Hollander says they were and he sent for a policeman and had them put off Misery Island, and now everybody who has any interest in that spot of green in Salem Harbor is as excited as can be.

Mr. Hollander has a Summer home on the island and Miss Connelley is the daughter of Thomas D. Connelley of Beverly Farms, who says he owns a share in the island. Miss Connelley asked permission of her father to take some of her friends to the island for a social Sunday afternoon, being granted, Miss Connelley and a dozen or so more started for the island in a couple of dories.

Mr. Hollander was awaiting them, clad in a bathing suit, on the pier. He motioned them off, and thinking that perhaps the pier was not the one, the party landed further down the shore. Over to them ran Mr. Hollander, who told them that they had no right there, were not wanted and that they must get away from there.

Miss Connelley says that she told Mr. Hollander that they had a legal right there and that he replied he would have their boats and leave if they didn't get away. The party then went to another part of the island and Mr. Hollander telephoned to W. O. Chapman, of Salem, one of the trustees of the island, to send a policeman over. The police say they were told there was a party of drunken and disorderly people on the island. Anyway, a policeman went over and told the young people they must get off. Miss Connelley says she told him that her father was one of the owners of the island and that she had a perfect right there, but that for the sake of peace she and her friends would depart.

Now Mr. Connelley is mad. Miss Connelley is indignant and some of the young ladies who were with her are ill as a result of the excitement. The policeman says the members of the party were well behaved and respectful. Mr. Hollander says that if he had known that any of the party were relatives of Mr. Connelley he would have made no objections to them landing. Miss Connelley says she told him who she was. Mr. Hollander, as said before, says that the members of the party were insulting and Miss Connelley says that they were not.

And yet it is whispered that while Mr. Hollander was putting up his little roast beef and pie lunch, one of the boys members told him not to use his mouth so much and that Mr. Hollander replied that his mouth was his own and that he would use it all he had a mind to.

Through the hospitality of persons interested in their welfare, one hundred North End boys from eight to fifteen years of age of the Hancock vacation school, who had had no previous outing, made a jolly trip to Wonderland yesterday, enjoyed the wonderful sights presented and had the time of their lives.

They were in charge of Head Master William A. Reed of the Hancock Summer School.

To most of them the trip was beyond their day-dreams, for they had never visited this paradise of fun before.

Marching in double file, the boys boarded a Boston & Northern car near the North Station at 10 a. m., and, obeying the injunction of the head master and giving very little work to the half dozen monitors, larger boys, equipped with office policeboloons and acting as lieutenants, the lads rode straight through to the main entrance at Wonderland, and, disembarking, swapped about the beach until 12:30.

All Shot the Chutes.

General Manager Thompson's preserves were then invaded and the lads having consumed their mid-day meal, formed in twos and presented quite a soldierly appearance circling the fairy rounds of Wonderland.

Leading into the boats, they shot the chutes, when, for the first time, their little throats broke out in shouts of glee, cheers and songs. From that time on they were the centre of attraction in the park.

Love's Journey was next visited, from which the children emerged with cheers of heartfelt approval and heads covered with confetti.

Then down to Ferari's animal show where the big cinnamon bear does stunts where Princess Irene whips into submission the wildest jungle cats, and where the great Captain Cordoval makes huge lions jump with the turn of his hand and conquers over and over again the fierce caged lionesses that so nearly ended his life recently and may yet succeed.

The monkeys and bears having added their meed of exhilaration, the boys trooped to the Circling Swings and took sky rides in the boats that look like air ships and fly like the wind.

Played Ball in Wild West.

Thence on to Kennedy's Wild West show, where, there being for active performance, the little fellows were given the privilege of the ground. They saw the peppermen, the ponies and the scouts and closed with a game of baseball played by teams taken from their number, with the other eighty two youngsters sitting in the grandstand shouting encouragement.

The open air show near the chutes chained their attention until the return of the car at 4 o'clock, which landed them all safely back in Canal street.

4 DOCTORS PERFORM OPERATION ON MRS. REGINALD C. VANDERBILT TO-DAY

MRS. REGINALD C. VANDERBILT, WHO IS ILL, AND HER BABY.

Vanderbilt Country Home at Sandy Point Is Transformed into Temporary Hospital.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—The physicians in charge of the operation upon Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, which took place at 11 o'clock to-day pronounce the result a complete success.

It was feared that an operation could be avoided, but the recent serious attack at Saratoga made it imperative that it be done as a precautionary measure against a repetition of the trouble which has been diagnosed as gall stones instead of in digestion as was first supposed.

Dr. William T. Bull will perform the operation and there will be present Dr. Austin Flint, Jr., of New York, Dr. Charles W. Richard and Dr. Douglass P. A. Jacoby of Newport.

There is every reason to believe that the operation will be successful and that the patient will be completely cured in another month. The nature of the operation is by no means serious, but the physicians think that now they have located the cause of her ill-health, which dates back to the time of her marriage. A little over a year ago she underwent a similar operation and found considerable relief at that time, so a permanent cure is anticipated this time.

Mrs. Vanderbilt prepared her friends for her retirement by recalling invitations which she had sent out for a dinner company last evening, the statement that would rest for a month following. Her more intimate friends, though, have felt for some time that an operation would sooner or later be found necessary. In view of the fact that, save for the weakness occasioned by her attack at Saratoga, Mrs. Vanderbilt's health is very good, it is considered believed that she will rapidly recover from to-day's ordeal. Several rooms in the second story of the residence at Sandy Point were transformed to-day into a hospital with equipment for any emergency as nearly perfect as possible.

JUDGE INSULTS LABOR, DECLARE UNION LEADERS

Recent Question Asked by Judge Grover of Organizer Donnelly.

LATTER WAS FINED $25

How long since you did a days honest work?" peremptorily demanded Judge Grover from the bench of the Norfolk County Court of John H. Donnelly of Philadelphia, a labor union organizer, before him on the charge of assaulting strike breakers.

"I am organizer of the Textile Workers' Union, answered Donnelley, "and I think that I am doing honest work."

"Answer my question," said Judge Grover.

"I am a carpet weaver, but I haven't worked at weaving for some fifteen years, answered Donnelly.

Officers and workers in the trades union movement are speaking their indignation freely to-day at what they term Judge Grover's slur on organized labor.

Donnelly Found Guilty.

Donnelly was brought into court yesterday to answer to the charge of assault upon Pietro Senzola, an Italian strike-breaker. Donnelly testified that he had been in East Braintree working in the interests of the J. H. Cochran's strikers and that Senzola had sought to make trouble then Judge Grover asked the questions to which the men representing organized labor take direct exception.

Donnelly was bound over, fined $25, and ordered to furnish $500 bonds in keeping the peace for six months. He appealed and gave bond in $500.

Labor leaders approved themselves intelligent as follows on Judge Grover's attitude.

John R. Price, organizer of the painters' Union No. 725, and president of the Boston Wage Earners' Central Union: "No judge has any right to ask such a question. Organizers of labor work hard. They do not get a vacation, but a judge takes his whenever the feels like it and the State foots the bill."

Martin F. Joyce, president of the Boston Central Labor Union.

"Every worker in the trades union movement should resent such a question as a personal insult. No judge elected by the people would cast a slur upon organized labor."

Peter W. Collins, general secretary treasurer of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and former business agent of Boston Electrical Workers' Union, No. 103:

"The judiciary of Massachusetts should be elected by the people, and the concentrated effort by labor to attain such an end has already begun in the formation of Wage Earners' Clubs."

Organizer a Hard Worker.

John F. Kennedy, business agent of Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17:

"When a judge has framed such a question as the work performed by the agent of a labor organization, what motive can be ascribed to the presumption of organized labor except when they appear before such judges? No organized labor organization works harder than the business agent and organizer. He fights as well as days are devoted to the cause of the men."

69 DAYS

have elapsed since the BOSTON AMERICAN filed with the Attorney-General a formal information and petition that he bring suit to force the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Albany Railroad to obey the law and to abandon the competing trolley lines which they have illegally acquired.

The Attorney-General has delayed action until the New Haven road has disposed of its holdings secretly to a "voluntary association" organized by itself which is not subject to the control of the State Railroad Commissioners.

Why did the Attorney-General delay?

PARTNER IN "LOVE SYNDICATE" ARRESTED ON LARCENY CHARGE

Mrs. Izella Brown Accused of Buying Laces for Which She Could Not Pay.

Complainant Says She Bought $300 Worth and Paid but $75 of the Bill.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Izella Brown, one of Mrs. Bina F. Verrault's aids and also the hidden power of the Love Syndicate, as the "Ghosts of Mystery," at No. 325 West Eighty-second street, was arrested at her home yesterday afternoon, taken to police headquarters, photographed for the Rogues' Gallery, subjected to a long, severe examination, and then locked up in the Mercer street station. After she had been in a cell several hours (as long, believed to be lawyers obtained her release on $1,000 bail, for Justice Dodd or Poy Crawley, a Sixth avenue saloon keeper. The charge against her was grand larceny, by Abdulla Habeebe, a lace importer of No. 48 Greenwich street.

Another development in the case, you predict, was made known by George T. Verrault that he intended soon to institute an action for divorce, naming as co-respondent a man said to be intimately connected with an electrical company in Fulton street.

Got Warrant in April.

The warrant against Mrs. Brown was issued April 7 by Magistrate Finn in the Centre Street Court, it was charged she then living with Mrs. Verrault at No. 111 West Seventy-third street, but she moved April 8, and after efforts to find her failed, although detectives searched high and low for a month, she was found through the arrest of Mrs. Verrault a few days ago.

When Detective Sergeant McDonough climbed the stone stoop to the Eighty-second street house and rang the bell the door was loudly opened by George T. Allen, who is said to be Mrs. Brown's brother, and who at once was attired in livery, acting as footman for the Verrault ménage. Mrs. Hamilton called Adolphanus Verrault Allen, but when McDonough loudly threatened to break in the doors Mrs. Brown cried in a high voice: "Come Khouna, come out and agreed to submit to arrest. She came out dressed for the street at 2 o'clock, an hour later, accompanied by her colored maid, Khouna, and in a cab to police headquarters.

In the fashionable neighborhood with down in every respectable were opened and women craned their necks to see Mrs. Brown arrested.

As the cab turned to drive away a large-sized gentleman in spectacles who dow of "The House of Mystery" was flung open. A moment later a pale, pained, latchet of lime colored water upon the sill, then flung its contents into the street. Allen, who had turned to re-enter the house, received the contents, and the stood stock still in amazement, but the first shocked was followed by a second, drenching him to the skin. He then rushed inside and shouted up to the woman, who, seeing what she had done, threw up her hands with a cry and the tin pail clattered to the sidewalk. Allen then hurriedly entered the house amid the hoots of the onlookers.

Drenched by Mistake.

The woman who had drenched him by mistake was recognized as Miss Lillian Brown, daughter of Mrs. Brown, and said to be Allen's new sweetheart. She had come to Chicago for the last month and only returned this week.

At headquarters Mrs. Brown gave the name of Mrs. Grace Brown. She was asked that Charles O'Mara, whom she said was connected with a law firm at No. 87 Nassau street, be notified, but before the minutes had elapsed a young man entered the police office and Mrs. Brown was asked to see Mrs. Brown.

When Mrs. Brown was taken in Mrs. Brown said he was her attorney and that she wished to consult with him. She refused to give his name and was then told she could not speak to no man but Habeebe, who was unknown to the police. She resisted to her utmost and the effort was decided. The woman was subjected to a searching cross-examination by Detective Sergeant Dunn and Lieutenant Gallagher, She was then taken to the Rogues Gallery, photographed, finger printed and her will. Other charges, it is understood, will soon be preferred against her.

Got $300 Worth of Laces.

Abdulla Habeebe, the complainant, says he met the woman on March 14, and that at first he refused to take any orders for his goods at No. 111 West Seventy-third street. He alleges the collected laces, linens and underwear to the value of $300, but paid only $75 on account, and has been unable to collect the remainder.

These charges Mrs. Habeebe repeats Mrs. Brown. They are A. Hindin, No. 29 Hester street, $75; Mrs. Rosa Rosenblatt, Stamy, No. 30 Washington street, $50; Mrs. Catalina Alvarez, Miss Sadie Halpal, Liberty street, $200. All said they had knowledge of many more creditors.

Mrs. Izella Brown (on the left) and Mrs. Bina Verrault, alias Mrs. Helen Hamilton, partners in Love Syndicate. Mrs. Brown has been arrested on a charge of larceny. From a snapshot photograph made for the BOSTON AMERICAN.

CHARGED WITH ROBBING MAIL PUT UP FIGHT

Charged with stealing two letters from the mail, Dr. Francis R. Conway, aged seventy-eight, of No. 696 Tremont street, a bill collector connected with the Back Bay postoffice, was arrested this morning at 8:30 by two postoffice inspectors, and he will be arraigned in the United States Court today.

Conway came in and deposited his mail for delivery before going out on his last trip, and the inspectors hurriedly looked through the bunch and found that two decoy letters were missing. They started after Conway, and tried to induce him to accompany them peaceably to Station 10, where he eventually landed.

Seeing that he was cornered Conway, who is over six feet tall and built in proportion, put up a fight and was subdued only after a good drubbing to the inspectors when A. J. Gorman, and Frank Jordan rushed in from the Dope Auto garage and assisted the officers. Conway was subdued and taken to the station.

Officers Perkins and Robinson placed decoy letters containing money in one of the boxes Conway collects from and both letters were found on his person.

Conway was always looked upon as a faithful worker, and one who has tried to get ahead by putting in his spare time studying needlework, which finally resulted in his securing the title of M. D.

EXPERTS TEST THAW'S SANITY; DEFENCE PLANS

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Emotional insanity will be the defence of Harry K. Thaw, when brought to trial for killing Stanford White on the roof of the Madison Square Garden.

This plea, although often discussed by Lawyer Hartridge and his associates, was not definitely settled upon until yesterday, when Thaw willingly submitted to a long examination by Dr. Peterson, Dr. D. D. Evans of the Morris Plains (N. J.) Asylum, and Dr. C. J. Wagner, alienists who have figured prominently in murder cases as experts for defendants.

Dr. Frank McGuire, the Tombs physician, requested the jailbird's being present, for when the party went with Thaw to the hospital cell he was excited and the conference was considered privately.

Other alienists who have been retained by Thaw's counsel will examine him shortly.

It is said in the District Attorney's office that the defence of Thaw will not bear a legal test. Mr. Garvan is preparing to demonstrate that the claim that there is any form of insanity or momentary existence is mythical.

GOT PIPE LINE $1,000; NOW HE NEEDS MORE

"Marsh" Thompson Says "I Can Deliver the Colored Vote."

THINKS WHITNEY IS GOOD

Marshall Thompson [illegible] never saw the political money market as it is at the present time. The [illegible] bright says he can see are Elec[illegible] Draper and Henry M. Whitney.

Marshall says nobody [illegible] away from Draper, to whom he [illegible] he thinks it more than likely he will [illegible] to drop in on Mr. Whitney or Boy Governor.

"I got one thousand bones out of the pipe line deal, and I would like to get another bit of money this Fall, and so I think I will see Mr. Whitney," is the way Marshall puts it.

"There's nothing in the [illegible] now days long gone by and the faulty cooler is pretty low, but I have hopes [illegible] going to come my way before very [illegible] Mr. Thompson, as he [illegible] political situation. For years he [illegible] himself the leading colored Re[illegible] Boston, and [illegible] who [illegible] there age of the [illegible] deny his leadership, but [illegible] and stand. by him during [illegible] between campaigns Mr. [illegible] is known as the State Hou[illegible] a disgruntled lobbyist, [illegible] that he is the only [illegible] ruler of the Third House.

"Guild Has Got to Hustle."

"Politics are not what they used to be," is the lament of Marshall. "The [illegible] good of the party or what the leaders tell us to do, but they [illegible] to make good for such work with the kind of [illegible] that buys and sells [illegible] a few of the luxuries, the necessaries and [illegible] got to [illegible] for himself," declares Marshall. "Of course I won't talk against Guild, but I won't defend him if he [illegible] him. He owed me $100 and [illegible] But I will fight the man who roasts Draper. He is the only friend of the colored man. But, as I said, I have never seen money on end as hard as [illegible]

Marshall was asked if he had seen Henry M. Whitney.

"Not yet, but very quick I guess," was his answer. "Mr. Whitney knows I like him and that I have been square [illegible] about him. He is a good man. He gave good money for good work when he wanted the pipe line bill passed through the Legislature I used my influence for him. I know, and Lawson knows, I did him. He knows what I delivered. Senators and other members of the House.

"Made a Clean Thousand."

"I took them down to the locker room and made the divvy, making a clean thousand on the deal for myself. I feel [illegible] long enough to find out how it feels to have all that bunch, when along comes the White Man and says he can show me how I can double it. Just come along with me down to State street, he says, and I will show you how the white pimpers get rich quick. I agreed. Next day he needed more coin for margin. That was all there was to that flyer in Consolidated Gas. I'm not [illegible] soon Mr. Whitney yet, but this is no time for sentiment in politics. I am a good party man, but I don't seem to be appreciated round here except by Draper and Whitney. What's the use wasting time with a Republican State committee that is run by the hole when Big Gibby has a Whitney barrel. Moran's all right, I like him and people like him, but he is just a little short. Foss has got stuff, but I don't think he can win me away from Draper."

"Will Talk with Whitney."

Asked what he thought would be the leading issue of the campaign, Mr. Thompson replied: "Reciprocity and stand up for the Republican party."

That's a Draper and Whitney platform. They are the chief planks of the money platform. I will say to Whitney that you can do something for him in the vote line on the pipe line proposition, of course, and he can see his way clear to reciprocate in the proper way. That is reciprocity all right—the winning kind. I've seen Mr. Draper, and I guess I will talk over coin with Mr. Whitney."

After a moment's deep study Marshall shook his head and remarked: "But I think Moran should happen to fall a few score nothing could stop him."

CAN SEE MONADNOCK.

There are no rides like those in the electrics of the Blue Hill "reservation route" down through the region of the "Great Blue Hills," from whose top, on one of these fine days, can be clearly seen the shore of old Monadnock in New Hampshire, nearly 70 miles away.

OUR OWN 'BIG BILL'

BY HARRY B. METCALF.

You may talk about Babe Waddell,
Who, with wide, seductive swing
Lures the baffled, bunco'd batter
Into mid-air lunacy;
You may eulogize Nick Altrock,
He whom White Sox fans adore—
His hot, sizzling curves have often
Worked the helpless batsmen o'er;
You may wax ecstatic over
Orth and Chesbro, Griffith's best,
And the "Human Slat" may thrill you
As he winds up for the quest;
You may toast the hends of Bender,
Or the glancing glints of Glade,
But "Big Bill," when he feels like it,
Puts all rivals in the shade.

Umpire—Sheridan.

The Tigers will play the last game of the season in this city this afternoon against the Pilgrims. The local team has already won two games, and they will go hard after to-day's contest.

Cy Young, who pitched such a gilt-edged game against the White Sox last Friday, will be on the firing line for the locals to-day, while either Mullin or Fox-hall will do the twirling for the visitors.

The Bostons won yesterday's game by a score of 5 to 2. Bill Dinneen was on the rubber for the home team, while Sie-ver, the clever southpaw, was in the box for the Detroits.

Dinneen pitched good ball with the exception of the sixth and ninth. The Detroits scored two runs in the sixth, on a base on balls and three singles. In the ninth they got two hits, but no runs were forthcoming.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Jack Slattery, who caught for the Cardinals earlier in the season, witnessed the sport from a seat in the grandstand.

Ferris, Huey and Grimshaw did good stick work for the Bostons, each getting a single and a triple. * * *

Schaefer went to bat for Siever in the ninth, but hit into a double play.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—The Boston National, still in a crippled condition, arrived here last night for a series of three games before going on to Chicago to meet the Cubs. It is very probable that Manager Tenney will make a desperate effort in the two in this city to fill out his stingy little string.

The Tenneyites are no longer an attraction to the villagers since they have fallen into the present state of decay. Their visit is most generally succeeded by the last game and this time will hardly prove any exception.

The two choices for the noxwork to-day will probably be Pfeffer and Rhoden, neither of whom has pitched for several days. Before noon the sky was overcast and threatening, but the weather prophets thought they saw plenty of chance for good weather. The management, however, got out rain checks in case of necessity. Whether with the rain prospects and the Bub team it is probable that will be but a poor attendance at to-day's game.

HARVARD CREW IS SHOWING UP WELL NOW

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Hot and sultry weather did not deter both crews from indulging in some hard work yesterday.

Toward noon the river banks were lined with people who are becoming constant in attentiveness to the work of the eights. The Cambridge boat was the first one out of the boat house. The shell headed northward to Marlow Point, the stroke pacing them off to about 30, on the way to Lind bridge the pace was increased to 32, and many sprints were taken with the stroke as high as 35. The form displayed by the Englishmen was a decided improvement over the work of late. The men seem to be in much better condition and their efforts exhausted them but little.

The Harvard crew appeared about noon time. No time was lost in getting the shell in the water, on which they stayed about ten minutes. They also headed toward Marlow and Captain Filley started them off at 34. This pace was not diminished for several minutes on the way back a decided spurt was taken and the oars were going at 37 to the minute. The men showed excellent condition.

Morgan's expected arrival on the 5th is beginning to make considerable talk about making the change in the boat. Glass returned from London to-day with his knee in bandages, but able to get about. He is not expected to be back in the boat for several days.

CAN BAT TAKE GANS'S PUNCH?---BY TAD

CAN NELSON STAND THE GANS WALLOP?

BY TAD.

Gameness and the ability to assimilate punishment are going to cut a vast amount of ice in the coming championship battle between Gans and Nelson.

The very mention of gameness brings the name of Nelson to the front. It was this quality that put the "Battler" where he is, and according to many it will keep him there.

Nelson is certainly a "gamer" man than Gans. There is a line in Gans's record showing he stopped in his battle with Frank Erne, claiming that the latter had knocked out of its socket from a bout Erne won because the dark gent refused to battle further.

There is nothing in the Dane's record to show where he ever stopped. Joe Hedderick put him to sleep on one occasion time in six rounds. Nelson was there at the finish, fighting as hard as he had been in the first round.

Young Corbett put him down twice in their fights. The Dane got up and knocked the Denverite out cold on both occasions.

Terry McGovern, whose terrible punch has downed more conners than any other in the world, didn't even ruffle the great front Hegeswitch when they fought. Terry landed at least five or six times finds on the jaw with his right, but he might just as well have thrown it up in the air. It had the same effect.

Aurelio Herrera, the hardest hitter that the lightweight division ever saw and probably ever will see, failed to daze Nelson. Herrera can hit as hard, if not harder, than Gans, but he is not as accurate with his punch. At any rate he dropped Nelson to the mat in Butte with a right hander, but lost the fight after that. His punch couldn't stop the foreing Dane.

The question now is will Gans have the necessary sonk the day he meets the Dane.

Gans is the cleverest, coolest and most accurate man in the world, but will his punch stop that rushing gale from Riga? which?

Gans will not be the aggressor in this battle. He will not do the forcing one minute of the go, and it will much be lacking his heart will soon depart.

CHERRY CIRCLE WINS.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Cherry Circle of the Chicago A. A. won the Lipton cup by finishing fourth in yesterday's race to Bilgewater. Columbia Yacht Club, Meadota, Milwaukee Yacht Club, and Toledo, Toledo Yacht Club, finished in the order named, gives Cherry Circle 2667 points. Bilgewater, which won yesterday's contest, was second with 2143 points.

VANDERBILT WINS TWICE.

DEAUVILLE, France, Aug. 22.—W. K. Vanderbilt's Acacia won the prix Conseil General and his Second Flight won the prix Tongues of the races here yesterday.

DESHLER COULDN'T KEEP UP HOT PACE

Fighting like a couple of young demons, Matty Baldwin and Dave Deshler, two local champs, indulged in fifteen of the fiercest rounds ever seen at the Lincoln A. C. arena last night and then at the end the decision of the referee was a draw.

It was the second time they had met in the same ring and the second time that the same decision was rendered, so their comparative ring abilities remain still an open question.

There were many of the opinion that Deshler should have been awarded the verdict as he kept in front by his superior cleverness for more than half the distance, but he neglected to finish while Matty came strong in the latter part of the journey and had Deshler on edge that a well-aimed attack would soon have finished him, but Matty did not have the power left to fasten on the killing punch and Deshler kept going till the windup.

It was Baldwin's spectacular finish that made it possible for him to secure an even break and he certainly deserved the decision by the exertion in which he put his foe.

The staunch little Charlestown pugilist figured that Deshler would tire by his own efforts and then would be his time to come out of his wraps and end the contest, but the clever Dave easily accomplished his object, as Deshler was very seldom caught napping in the few rounds and hung on repeatedly to save himself from getting the hard wallopers which the felonious Bunker Hill slasher was handing out.

The bouts were full of action. There was no stalling in either boy. It was two hours of whirlwind work from the first to the last round.

Baldwin always awaited the oncoming Deshler, who was constantly feinting and jabbing, but when Deshler did open up Baldwin was ever ready to meet him with a few stiff ones and kept him guessing him and he whipped over numerous counters, landing in and catching Baldwin by his exceptional speed.

Deshler showed improvement over his previous form, doing better all round work, but he evidently weakened himself by making the weight, for when Baldwin did force the fight by his cleverness, which made it easier for Baldwin to get in some lively licks that nearly possessed a decisive defeat.

Baldwin secured the only knockdown, but Deshler did not remain on the mat but bounded up in a hurry and the fight went faster than ever. In the latter rounds he was very wobbly on his pins and unable to steadily himself on his foundations.

Both boys played for the head, trying to connect with the jaw and with the fingers by the short route, and Baldwin proved the most expert at the game. Deshler started in to wear his opponent down by forcing the fighting, but soon gave it up to outpoint his rival by clever work. Once or twice Matty was in a belt, but it was of little use after Baldwin found the jaw and had Deshler on the ragged edge of going under.

Baldwin was content to let Deshler come to him, hoping to cross him and he succeeded admirably, but it gave Deshler a chance to show to the front slightly for more than half the distance.

Both boys were well groomed for the fray, Deshler looked brawny as a berry boy, while Baldwin looked trim and fit, but his face was a little drawn and he appeared to be off his feed. Deshler, with downy head, seemed every inch a scrapper and Baldwin as clever as ever.

Matty ruled the favorite at the ringside at 10 to 8 in some quarters, but there were many who were willing to take the short end.

They weighed in at 3 o'clock, both doing under the 130 pounds and agreed to battle under straight Queensbury rules, with the referee empowered to use discretion.

Andy McGarry, the New York light weight, challenged the winner and Kid Murphy of Roxbury, who put in his challenge.

COMMITTEE WILL BEGIN TO OIL ROADS IN ONE WEEK FOR VANDERBILT RACE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The Board of Supervisors of Nassau County, Long Island, has granted permission to the A. A. A. for the holding of the Vanderbilt race on the roads through Long Island. This action on the part of the board was to be expected, considering the great revenue that the contest has given to Long Island during the past two years, and the fact that the race really opened up those roads to motordom. Since the desired permission has been granted the racing board has gone to work making preparations for the preliminaries which come on September 22, and the grand final to be held October 6. The method of oiling the course will commence on September 1, so that it may all be done in season to permit of the holding of the events as a matter of practice work. Special arrangements will be made between the hours when the racing machines are allowed to run, fighting as hard as he had been in the first round.

Young Corbett put him down twice in their fights. The Dane got up and knocked the Denverite out cold on both occasions.

Terry McGovern, whose terrible punch has downed more conners than any other in the world, didn't even ruffle the great front Hegeswitch when they fought. Terry landed at least five or six times finds on the jaw with his right, but he might just course as last year to Old Westbury. This, instead of taking the dangerous S turn at Albertson, the cars will run north along the Old Westbury road to Roslyn, along the North Hempstead turnpike to Mineola and along the Middle Neck road south to Jerusalem.

There they will turn east again along the Long Island road, the same as last year, only in a reverse direction, to Southgton, where they turn south along Mineola avenue to King's Corner, the starting point.

President Irving H. Page of the Stevens-Duryea Co. is spending a few weeks along the North Shore. He makes his headquarters at Nantasket, and enjoys himself with an occasional spin in the "Big Six" along the North Shore and other resorts.

Frederick E. Randall, local agent for the Stevens-Duryea, returned from the factory with the doleful story that he was not to get all the "Big Sixes" that he desired for next year's delivery. Mr. Randall went to Springfield with an order for 100 of the big cars in his pocket, and was surprised to learn that the company already figured on making 750 the coming year, and that his allotment was 25. These he will begin to deliver on December 1.

R. R. Dickey, an engine manufacturer of Dayton, Ohio, arrived in Boston yesterday, driving from his home city in a four-cylinder Franklin. He went direct to Gloucester, where he is to spend a month. He reports roads over which he traveled as being bad, and especially those in central New York. Since arriving in the East however, he finds a decided improvement, and if they are as good along the Cape as they were from New York here he will do considerable touring.

W. G. Goodyear and party of Buffalo, N. Y., passed through Boston in a Pierce Great Arrow yesterday, bound to the Maxwell-Briscoe factory at Brockton Woods. The party had started from Buffalo, and met with considerable interesting travels along the route of the recent A. A. A. tour.

* * *

W. E. Metzger of the Cadillac Co., sailed for Europe yesterday. It is said that he had gone abroad to investigate the advantages of establishing a foreign branch of his company.

George A. Patten of the Lincoln Motor Co. has returned from Selango Lake, where he spent his vacation.

Horace B. Hobbs is the latest of the local men to catch the automobile bug. He has completed arrangements for the establishment of an establishment in Providence, where he is to handle the Royal Tourists and the Oldsmobile lines.

ARDELLE A FAVORITE IN THE PACING CLASS

BY EDWARD E. COGSWELL.

With a day's vacation through the postponement of yesterday, the Grand Circuit horses at Readville are in fine fettle to continue the sport this afternoon. Naturally the track is some heavy, but, with no more rain, it should be in prime shape by the time the first heat is called.

The drivers and owners enjoyed themselves yesterday by lounging around the hotel corridors in the city, talking horse or taking in the theatres. One of the billiard parlors was well patronized by the talent, and it was surprising how dexterous some of the knights of the sulky handled the cue.

It was remarked by a bystander that the light touch of the professional reinsman is just what is required for an expert billiard player. There was an effort made to arrange a match between Johnny Carpenter and Jack Curry for the championship of the trainers, but it was deferred to a later date.

A the subject of discussion between the horsemen was the reading of the law regarding the right to bet on the result of horse races in the State. Those who took the no side of the argument were greatly in the minority, and it is surmised that in many instances they took that side of the question merely to make matters lively.

Referring to the present law brought out the fact that Dr. J. W. Jay of Waterloo, N. Y., owner of the good stallion Captain Bacon, did more than any other light harness horseman in his State in bringing about the law in force there permitting speculation on the races, both running and trotting.

He stumped the State from border to border educating the farmers to the benefits they would derive in securing a per cent. of the gross receipts of the race meetings, the same to go towards advancing the State and County fairs. Since the law has been in operation this money has amounted to a tidy sum, and the benefit can be seen in the increased splendor of the annual Fall festivals which delight the agricultural sections.

On every point the races for this afternoon must result in exciting contests. Naturally the Ardelle, Bingen and Cochato look from the road like Ed. Geers ought to win with the sa far Indubible Ardelle. She has headed the summary from the start of the Grand Circuit. It seemed, too as though she won without being all out.

However, there is Arrest Boy, besides a lot more in the race, for the purpose of making all of the leather possible for the favorite. Knowing this it was some time that the record for the Norfolk will be lowered from 2:04¾, made by Morning Star a couple of seasons since.

With good setting El Milagro will be surely even money against the ones who draw positions to start. He is credited a much better trotter now than since he has been on the turf. If he does what is expected there will be another 2:10 trotter in the list for McKinney.

Three-Year-Old Trots.

The three-year-old trot has excited attention all over the country. Not only breeders of the light harness horses are interested, but the ones who are delighted to see a good horse come.

Considering that Gay Bingen won at Cleveland and Buffalo, securing a record of 2:12¼, he has the right to be the logical favorite. Opposed to him, though, is the local stallion, Cochato, which last week in Poughkeepsie turned the course in 2:12¾, and those who saw it say that think he can trot in 2:10.

By no means is the measure of Ed Custer known. It is barely possible that the two first named may go at each other so stoutly in the first heat that the son of Bingenwood can come along and pull off the trick in time around 2:12. Anyway, Chandler will be strongly of the idea that a co ple of heats right in that notch will carry off the $1,000 prize offered by the American Horse Breeder.

NEARLY 20,000 LETTERS RECEIVED IN THE GIRLS' DOLL'S HOUSE CONTEST

The "Happy House" May Be Yours, So Write the Best Letter You Can About How You Would Keep House

THE Doll Editor is pretty busy these days reading all the letters received from little girls who are trying to win the doll house.

This photograph gives you some idea of the number of letters which have been received. And letters from little girls all over New England keep coming in by every mail.

It takes a great deal of time to read all these letters, but the best will be selected before long now, and some little girl will be the happy winner of the beautiful "Happy House" and all the "Happy" family.

Marjorie and Dorothy and Harold and their sister Elsie are having a very happy experience.

Now you will want to know what the experience is.

Well it's a kindergarten.

Mrs. Happy thought the children were running about too much in the hot weather, so she consulted a friend about it.

"What can I do," she said, "to keep them quiet for an hour in the mornings?"

She thought a while and then said: "Why not have kindergarten for a while every morning? I would just love to teach them and we could have it out in the tent so as not to disturb you and the baby."

Mrs. Happy thought that a splendid idea, and so did the children when their board about it.

So now every morning at 10 o'clock they go out to the tent and have kindergarten until 12.

At 11 they have a touch of ginger cookies and milk.

They are learning to make such pretty things as a surprise for their mother's birthday.

Marjorie is weaving a lovely paper mat in blue and white.

Harold is pasting a red and white picture frame.

Elsie is sewing a gay mat in green and red wool, and Dorothy, who is too little to make anything very difficult, is stringing a long bead chain.

The girl who wins Happy House and the Happy family can have great fun inventing games for the dolls.

Do you know how to win it?

Little Girls Tell How They Would Keep House

See If You Can Write a Better Letter Than Any of These and You May Win the Doll's House.

HUNDREDS of letters are being received from bright girls who would like to win "Happy House" and the "Happy" family. Here are some from to-day's mail. See if you can write a better letter than the best of these:

MAKE 'EM NERVOUS

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

In the morning when I get up I would dress the children and give them their breakfast, then make the beds, wash the dishes, sweep the floor, scrub the hall and stairway. Then get luncheon, get dressed, dress the children and take them out to get the fresh air. I would not give the children anything to eat as going to bed, as it would make them nervous.

THERESA KILDUFF, 12 years.
No. 762 Huntington avenue, Boston.

"HEAD TO TOE"

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

My house will be neat from top to bottom. I will keep everything in it neat and my children will have many enjoyments to make them happy. The children will be neat from head to toe, and be all brought up. Very much will they look Sunday.

DOROTHY GARDNER, 10 years.
No. 48 North street, New Bedford

CHILDREN MUST HELP

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

I would have a system in doing my housework. Monday I would wash all soiled clothes, pick up and dust rooms and put them in order. Tuesday I would iron and so on every day would bring its own work. I would ask my rooms thoroughly every morning, cook good healthy food, keep the children sweet and clean, teach them to be polite to young and old, and would have them help around the house so they would grow up useful men and women. JOSEPHINE ESTON, 9 years.
No. 49 Lopez street, Cambridge.

NO SWEETMEATS

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

If I were a little housekeeper I would have different work for every day in the week. In the morning on rising I would air all bedrooms, turn mattresses and let them air, dress the children in clean suits and teach them their prayers, and then have breakfast. After breakfast the sweet meats allowed, but just wholesome food the children would eat. Then get luncheon, get dressed, dress the children and take them out to get the fresh air. I would not give the children anything to eat as going to bed, as it would make them nervous.

NO LIMIT TO MONEY

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

If I were keeping house I would keep it neat as it neat as mamma's. I would dust every morning. I would take my children out in the afternoon. I would try and keep my children healthy. I wouldn't give them too much candy. I wouldn't keep account of how much they spent.

MARGUERITE KEENE, 9 years.

WIDE AWAKE

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

I am eight years old and help mother a good deal. I would get up early in the morning and do all my housework. I would keep the children clean and neat and have each one do a little work and be also neat. I would air my rooms thoroughly and laundry and have more time to do my family sewing. I would go shopping twice a week, take the children out every day and give them fresh air, put them early to bed and teach them their prayers.

VERY METHODICAL

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

I would then get the breakfast, do the dishes and do up the rest of the housework. I would then prepare the dinner. I would take very good care of my children. I would do for them in my spare time and teach them to be kind and truthful.

KATHRYN M. BRADLEY, 10 years.
Box 28, Millbury.

PLENTY OF FUN

DEAR DOLL EDITOR:

If I had this doll house I should try to keep it very tidy by doing some work every day. I would see that the children have all the fun they wanted, and feed them on healthy food. I should put them to bed early, and wake them early, and teach the children to behave and be polite wherever they are. They would always be dressed neatly and always respect well.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

"YES, of course; didn't you ask for me?" retorted Mrs. Bywater, still more sharply.

"I was to give you that," said the boy in a respectful manner, "when there was nobody about."

He produced an envelope from his pocket addressed to Mrs. Bywater in a woman's hand. She took it from him and glanced at the handwriting with a perceptible start, then looked quickly at the boy.

"Who are you? Where have you come from?" she cried, evidently startled.

"My name's Jim; I've come a long way —I wasn't to tell any one where from—that's all explained in the letter. I know the lady who wrote it; she's been very good to me. I can tell yer.

"All this is a fake," he said, touching the basket he carried. "She thought as it would be best, in case any one was hanging about on the lookout, so they might think I was just an errand boy, see?" he added in a low voice.

A Message

"Come inside and sit down," said Mrs. Bywater.

So Jim sat on a chair in the kitchen, while Mrs. Bywater opened the letter and read it with a look of startled interest on her face.

"Dear Mrs. Bywater—I am sending you this note by a boy I can trust implicitly, and I want you to send back an answer by him. I do not give you my address, not because I can't trust you—you know that, dear old Lorry, don't you?—but you might be asked questions, and it would be easier for you if you really knew nothing of my present address. That is why I send this boy instead of writing by mail.

"I am quite well, and I have found a friend and a shelter since the night I escaped from the train wreck.

"I have not been able yet to thank you for taking Freda, and giving her a home when this dreadful charge fell upon me—I don't trouble even to assert my innocence to you, because I know you would never believe it of your old pupil. But I thank you a thousand times for your kindness; it was like my old friend.

"Lorry, I want to see Freda—I must see her; that is why I write. Not here, where I am hiding, of course, and equally, of course, I cannot come up to New Rochelle —the risk would be too great. But I shall live in a fever of impatience until I see Freda, and I have thought out a plan.

"Will she go to the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street railroad station on Wednesday morning by the train arriving there from New Rochelle a few minutes past nine? She is to go into the waiting room, and I'll come to her there. You warn Freda to be cautious.

"Send back a verbal message—it will be safer than writing in case the messenger is seen and inspected—saying if Freda will come. Even if any other arrangements have been made for that day you will let me know, make it possible if you can.

"With much love and many thanks than I can ever express for all your goodness to Freda, yours always affectionately,

"OLGA."

Mrs. Bywater, then Miss Lawrence, had once been the governess of Olga and Freda at the old home in Yonkers. That old friendship had induced her—against her husband's inclinations, to which, for once, she refused to offer Freda a home upon Olga's arrest.

Adopts Disguise

With startled, eager eyes, Mrs. Bywater read every word of the letter. Then she turned to Jim; her voice shook a little as she spoke:

"The answer you are to take back to the lady was sent you with this letter is 'Yes,' and 'Lorry's dearest love.' Shall you remember?"

"You trust me to remember," said Jim, rising to go.

"Very well. Stop, I am going to give you something to eat before you go out."

She went to the dresser and took a knife from the basket and walked to the door of the little pantry. As she was opening the door she turned and said:

"You won't forget to say 'Lorry's dearest love,' because that's an important part of the message."

There were tears in Mrs. Bywater's eyes as she went into the pantry.

A plainly dressed woman wearing large nine glasses was walking up and down the platform at one hundred and Twenty-fifth street waiting for the arrival of the train from New Rochelle.

The children had, much to their delight, been granted an unexpected half-holiday from school that Wednesday. John Herries had begged them off to come to a picnic he had organized for them in his grounds. Miss Wynne had been seen at the station waiting for the train early in the morning and the fact occasioned a little gossip in the neighborhood.

It was quite manifest to the dames that the new schoolmistress was great in favor—possibly on account of her "foreign ways"—for one see would certainly have been included in Mr. Herries's invitation to the children.

Olga waited in feverish impatience for the train that was to bring Freda.

Jim had returned with his message, immensely proud of the way he had performed his duty. How fortunate it had been that Jim had come; she had been able to communicate with Freda without revealing her identity!

If the police made any effort to elicit her whereabouts from Jim, through the carelessness they would be absolutely ignorant of it.

That risk, and the risk of her letter falling into other hands, she had determined her from writing by mail; there had been no other messenger to send, Olga felt very grateful to Jim as she paced along the platform.

After she had spoken to Freda to-day, she would know the truth so far as her safety was concerned.

When she had taxed her with Armadale's story, knowing Freda as well, she felt that she could gather from her manner whether her answer was the truth.

If only she could go back to John Herries frankly and assure him of her conviction that her sister was innocent, that it had not been Freda who darted past Armadale on the dark stairs! That was the one burden of her thoughts as she waited for the train.

The train from New Rochelle came rushing into the station and slowed up.

CHAPTER XCIV.

Gems That Glittered

IF only she could part from Freda today feeling assured that it had not been her sister who had passed Armadale outside the murdered dancing woman's room! That was the one burden of Olga's thoughts as she stood pacing along the platform where she stood, and slowed up.

Her eyes scanned the passengers who got out; then, for the first time since her arrest, she saw Freda.

Freda stepped out on to the platform in a manner that she had been so cruelly used by circumstance with a look of serene unconcern; her face, charmingly pretty like a child's, betrayed no trace that her sister's sufferings had given her one moment's unrest of mind, and a little stab of pain passed through Olga as she saw the smiling face.

Had Freda no feeling at all that she could look so indifferent and untroubled?

But only for a moment did the bitterness find place in Olga's mind. She put it away from her resolutely, telling herself that after all Freda was only a child in spite of her years; and a child only realizes the seriousness of its own troubles, cannot enter into those of others.

Why should she blame Freda for what was but natural?

And surely Armadale's conviction was utterly wrong and mistaken. The woman who had passed him could not have been Freda. Olga felt sure of that. If it had been Freda, she could not have looked so unconcerned and indifferent now.

Need of Caution

She did not go up to Freda on the platform; she was too much impressed with the urgent need of caution. Freda's eyes roved over the little crowd of passengers and rested on her, but without recognition.

Then the girl walked toward the waiting room, paused once to look at herself with a self-satisfied, coquettish air in the adjoining mirror on the wall.

Olga waited a few minutes before she followed her.

To her relief Freda was the only occupant of the waiting room. Olga went swiftly up to her and kissed her impulsively.

"I am so very glad to see you again, dear!" the hunted woman whispered, almost forgetting in the first moment of meeting the reason why she had sought her sister. "And you'll remember, dear, to be cautious, and on no account to utter my name?"

Freda was too demonstrative.

It was beginning to wonder if you were coming—I've been waiting here nearly five minutes, and I expected to find you here," Freda said, in a calm, unemotional voice.

American Girls Should Imitate Their English Sisters in Making Their Voices More Mellow

By Beatrice Fairfax

THE other evening I sat near a group of women who were playing bridge.

Among them was a woman of about forty-five. She was a handsome, well-dressed woman, with an endless flow of conversation.

She looked charming, but the minute she opened her mouth the charm fled.

Not only was her voice high-pitched and nasal to a degree, but the amount of slang she used was astonishing.

"You're a beaut," "Not on your life," "Bet your boots" were a few of the expressions, and there were others equally or more objectionable.

The effect produced by the slang phrases falling from the lips of that dignified, elderly woman was unpleasant in the extreme.

However, if you contract the habit while young it is pretty sure to stick to you, for there is no habit harder to cure one's self of than the slang habit.

Shun Slang Words

SURELY there are enough words in the English language to supply the ordinary vocabulary.

So many words are considered slang nowadays that it is almost impossible to eliminate it entirely from conversation, but there is no use in going out of the way to bring it in at every turn.

It is not at all unusual to hear the words "bully" and "rotten" fall from the lips of a pretty, refined looking girl.

Did you ever hear of the bewitched fairy Princess from whose lips toads and vipers dropped every time she spoke?

The slang that falls from the lips of some of our girls of to-day might almost be compared to the toads and vipers of the Princess.

Pattern After English

THE English, who are noted the world over for their soft, well-modulated voices, say that all Americans speak through their noses.

That, of course, is an exaggeration, but we cannot but allow that there is a good deal of truth in it.

A soft voice is spoken of as "that most excellent thing in woman."

It is a quality that can be cultivated if you only have the strength of mind to keep at it.

To begin with, bring your voice down from the top of your head and speak softly.

Don't cultivate affectation, but do try and make your voice melodious by softness and purity of pronunciation.

One fault of many Americans is that they speak too quickly, clipping off a syllable from almost every word. Learn to speak distinctly and in a clear, low-pitched voice.

There is no reason why the girls of Boston should not have extremely musical voices, for the sea air is supposed to soften much harshness of the vocal chords.

Do not let your English cousins get ahead of you in the voice question.

So often you hear foreigners say when speaking of an American girl, "Yes, she is pretty and charming, but did you ever hear such a voice?"

Now, girls, it is your duty to correct that impression at this week and make your voice as pretty as your faces.

Learn the Secret of Keeping Your Youth

THE preservation of the freshness of youth and of whatever beauty, either of form or complexion or expression that Nature has given her, is a matter calling for ceaseless vigilance on every woman's part.

And since it is woman's duty—if not quite her whole duty—to be ever attractive and charming, she is entitled to practice whatever may conduce to her perfection.

The beauty of the new cult of youthfulness is that it is based on principles, on truths, that lead as surely to health as to beauty. For health is beauty.

Beauty, in short, depends upon the normal action of the heart—the physical pump within every one of us—a perfect circulation, a proper digestive apparatus, muscles rightly developed, and brain and nerve activities that are normal.

The Greatest Beauty

Many women have all the essentials of beauty of face, and yet are by no means beautiful, nor even pretty. They have regular features, a good skin; abundant hair, and taste in dress. But they lack one thing—a beautiful expression.

The greatest beauty of the face is character. By the complex word character is meant the mental attributes of the person—the sum total of the intentions, purposes, intellectual attainments, emotions, motives, aspirations of the individual.

If these are lofty and noble, the plainest face takes on a beauty and an interest that are lacking in those other features of complexion and regularity of features would seem to forever belie in good looks.

Wrinkles are not invariably blemishes. It is the spirit that etches them, and the right kind are not to be deprecated.

A face devoid of wrinkles after one has passed the age of childhood is a face without character.

A society belle was once reproved for laughing too much, for the reason plainly would appear when the lines about the mouth and produce crow's feet around the eyes.

It was absurd counsel, for the expression of joy and gladness give the countenance a charm that cannot be otherwise attained. Anger is responsible for effects, not only on the face but on the whole body.

Anger is a passion that should not be indulged in any more than the display of those emotions which are summed up in the word "temper." The results of anger and temper on the bodily organism are akin to those of illness.

How to Stand

There would be little need for physical culture schools for the development of the body if we made the best use of the movements common to all in the course of daily life.

Standing, walking and running, as well as ascending stairs, are very beneficial from the point of view of physical culture. Very few persons who have not been trained stand properly. If one wishes a test as to her correctness in this matter, let her take a moderately heavy book, and place it on top of her head, and balance herself to carry it easily. The head will come in a line with the rest of the body; the chin will be drawn in, the chest will be thrust forward, and the stomach back, the knees will be straightened and the feet placed together. How different is this form from the slouching attitude which so many habitually take.

And here is a proper way to walk:

As in standing, the chest should be expanded and carried well forward, as if a rosette were upon it which had to be supported and carried there. Balancing freely upon one foot so that ear, shoulder, hip and ankle come in a straight line, the walker should extend the other foot, that is touching the ground first and the foot coming quickly into a position of support as the body is swung forward for the next step.

But physical exercises are not by any means the only matters which should be dealt with at length. The care of the face, the moderation or elimination of features, the proper development of undeveloped limbs, and many other matters of purely feminine interest are most important.

PICKLED PEACHES

ONE gallon of vinegar, four pounds of brown sugar, take clingstone peaches and rub them with a soft cloth two or three times in each, put them into a glass or earthen bowl and pour the liquid over them boiling hot; cover them, and let them stand a week or ten days, then pour off the liquor and boil as before, and when cold return it boiling to the peaches which should be covered closely.

Let the vinegar and sugar, in the first place, just come to a boil.

LACE GLOVES A COMING STYLE

LACE gloves will be one of the novelties of the coming season, and every fashionable woman will affect them. The largest supply comes from Germany. The gloves are wonderfully fine and of pure silk.

They will not be comfortable wear, but they are for coming as a passing fancy, and of fashion. Lace is not strictly a glove material, but its defect in this respect has been overcome by the insertion of small pieces of the silk at all the points where pliability is needed most.

These strips are wrought in beautifully and can hardly be distinguished from the lace itself.

In the back of the hand the elastic is run in and out, the threading of it to a degree of quality does the elastic make the glove as easy to the hand as kid.

AS shown by the above illustration, a depressed nose is built up by the Famous Woodbury Method in a few moments, with no pain, no cutting, and no detention from daily affairs. This is no miracle, but a scientific treatment used successfully at this Institute for many years, and not used elsewhere.

WE CORRECT

above you see the frontispiece of the "Simple Life" Series. This is an original, highly beautiful, effective and easy to play piece of music, composed by Charles Wagner, of whose famous work President Roosevelt said: "I am preaching your book to my countrymen." The composer has infused into this musical composition the same lofty, noble and aspirations that pervade Mr. Wagner's prominent work.

From a meticulous as well as artistic point of view this piece is worth the time that we ask for it.

THREE WOMEN CLAIM REWARD FOR SAME SHOPPING PHOTO

The original of this snapshot will receive a reward of $2.

None of Them Were Right and Saturday's Picture Is Unidentified.

SATURDAY'S snapshot of a woman shopper caused lots of excitement. No less than three women called at the BOSTON AMERICAN office to identify it and win the award of $2.

Each of them, upon seeing a print of the original photograph, forcefully declared it was the picture of her. Yet each thought the reproduction in Saturday's paper was a likeness of herself.

This is but an index of the interest in this "woman shopper" feature, which is a daily institution. If you have a suspicion the daily snapshot may be a likeness of you, do not hesitate to call at the BOSTON AMERICAN office. You can tell at a glance whether or not you are the original.

If you are the camera man's subject, you win the daily prize of $2. If you are mistaken, no harm is done.

Watch out for the camera man. If he has not caught you yet, he may get you any day.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, AUGUST 22, 1906

Mr. Roosevelt's Importation of Chinese

We Cannot Believe That They Will Be Used on the American Canal or Elsewhere in Our Territory. IN ANY CASE IT WON'T LAST LONG

An interesting and startling announcement asks us to believe that President Roosevelt proposes to dig the American Panama Canal with Chinese coolie labor.

It has been stated positively—so positively that we can scarcely question the authority—that after consultation with his son-in-law, Mr. Longworth, the President has rejected all the protests of American labor and declared that the canal shall be dug by coolie labor.

This is partly the result of letting out the canal to contractors. If the government were to dig the canal under the management of West Point engineers or other engineers, PAYING LABOR WELL AND ENFORCING SANITARY CONDITIONS, the ordinary American citizen would be satisfied. BUT THERE WOULD BE NO PROFIT FOR THE NATIONAL PROFIT-MAKERS IN SUCH AN ARRANGEMENT.

In order that "friends of the government" should be happy it was necessary to let out enormous CONTRACTS.

Under the contract system the men that work will be paid as LITTLE as possible. The government will pay as MUCH as possible AND THE DIFFERENCE WILL GO INTO THE POCKETS OF THE CONTRACTORS.

Hence the importation of twenty-five hundred Chinese laborers as a start. And hence a question the size of which we don't believe Mr. Roosevelt and his friends quite realize.

The canal is to be dug on territory belonging to the United States, and is, therefore, part of the United States. Conditions there ARE UNHEALTHFUL. It is true that some of the labor from Jamaica hitherto used is not very reliable. It is also true, however, that the Jamaica laborers have been very badly treated. They have been paid as little as eighty cents a day, and worked very long hours.

The proposition of Mr. Roosevelt and his son-in-law is to solve the problem by hiring Chinese coolies from the wholesale slave drivers in China. These coolies will be sent over here in droves, TO DIE HERE IN DROVES OR TO LIVE, AS THE CASE MAY BE. They will get slave wages—just enough to keep them alive, and the contractors who send them will get the balance.

A good many questions are involved in this apparently simple proposition to dig the United States canal with the help of the Chinese.

Is this country going to use the money belonging to the people in employing what are practically slaves? Can we not afford to spend a little more money and make it possible for AMERICAN workmen to do that work? Mr. Shonts—the friend of Roosevelt—can go to the isthmus and stay there without dying of fever. WHY? Because he gets PURE WATER to drink, decent food, a bed with protection from the mosquitoes.

Isn't this country rich enough to give WORKINGMEN pure water and decent food? Isn't it a fact that we deliberately propose to murder thousands of men in the digging of that canal when the spending of a little money would give employment to American workingmen under sanitary conditions? The profit of the contractors would let American labor do the work free from disease.

Is that the kind of an example that the richest republic in the world is going to put before humanity?

The people of this country have absolutely declared against Chinese immigration and Chinese labor. They have only a friendly feeling for the Chinese as a nation. But they do not propose to have them here. AND MR. ROOSEVELT WILL FIND THAT THEY DO NOT PROPOSE TO HAVE THEM ANYWHERE ON AMERICAN TERRITORY, no matter what he or his son-in-law may think about it.

If Mr. Roosevelt doesn't learn that in the course of the next few weeks, he will learn it in the course of the next few months. We predict that he will declare most forcibly very soon that no Chinese will work for this government at Panama.

A fraction of the amount of money that the government gives to favorite contractors, which it allows to be stolen by the railroads through the postoffice, which it scatters in every conceivable direction, would make it possible to dig the Panama Canal with American labor without serious loss of life.

Money SHOULD be spent in that way, not in enriching the contractors, or in bringing near to our home labor market thousands upon thousands of Chinese coolies.

Mr. Roosevelt has made a serious mistake—one that he will never live down, unless he shall remedy it promptly.

Little Editorials from the People

A STORY AND A MORAL

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Apropos of the regularity with which workingmen vote against their own interests every year, the following story may be told:

A certain Dutchman, whose knowledge of natural history was somewhat limited, had a dog, a female, which one day brought into the world a fine litter of puppies. The Dutchman was so interested he used to leave his work several times a day to watch the little family. On the second day he went to his wife with a sorrowful expression, saying: "Those puppies was all killed." The third day found them in the same condition, and the Dutchman determined to put them to death as a merciful act to prevent them growing up blind. Taking one of the little creatures by the hind legs he struck its head on a block of wood and killed it. In its death spasms the puppy opened its eyes. The Dutchman soliciously rushed to his wife in astonishment and terror exclaiming: "Mein Gott in Himmel, you haf to knock their brains out before they open their eyes." Is the moral plain?

MATCH-SCRATCHING A NUISANCE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I have just made a wonderful discovery, surely no one else has ever found it out, especially the smoker, that our beautiful monuments erected in different parts of our city, Uncle Sam's mail boxes and where it is convenient for us all to drop our letters, beautifully painted and letter signs of our many stores, etc., are simply placed where they are for the purpose of scratching matches on.

When we scratch a match let us ask ourselves the question: Have I the right to deface another person's property?

What Is the Age Limit of Girlhood?

By Dorothy Dix

THE Young Women's Christian Association, which is frequently more courageous than discreet, has rashly tackled the problem of when a girl ceases to be a girl, and in Philadelphia the Executive Board of the Home for Working Girls has posted a notice to the effect that all the occupants who are more than thirty-five years old must go.

Inasmuch as a home for working girls is supposed to be a sort of stepmother and takes the place of a chaperon, it was doubtless considered that its mission was peculiarly to the young, and not to women old enough to take care of themselves. Hence the separation of the lambs from the sheep.

In a way this is true. Thirty-five years seems a liberal allowance of time to give a woman in which to arrive at maturity.

It also affords her ample leisure in which to have lost those ephemeral charms of beauty supposed to be a source of danger to young females and necessitating their having an ark of refuge to which to flee from the attentions of the masher, and one is inclined, off-hand, to agree with the association, and say that a woman of thirty-five has no more place in a working girl's home than an old stager has in a two-year-old race.

No Fixed Rules

BUT while this is theoretically the case, in reality it is far enough from being so. Thirty-five is oftener the age of indiscretion with an unmarried woman than it is the age of discretion.

Like Peter Pan, she lady without a husband simply won't grow up, and there are no such giggling, gushing young things as those who are old enough to know better.

Observation shows that the older an old maid grows the giddier she acts and the younger she dresses, as a general thing.

No one is so insistent on talking about "we girls," or can ring it into the conversation so many times a minute, as the spinster whose debut is ancient history.

Nobody so set on baby-blue ribbons and sweet little white muslins, that button down the back, and sailor hats, as the woman who is good and forty, instead of sweet and twenty. No girl so girlish-girly as the girl of thirty-five unless it is the girl of fifty-five.

So there you are. What are you going to do about it? Who is to decide when a woman ceases to be a girl—when the public holds one side of the question and the woman the other? She ought to know, oughtn't she?

Certainly no arbitrary rules can be laid down on the matter. There are women who are elderly in their cradles and others who are helpless babies to the days of their death from old age.

If any limit can be set on the time when girlhood ends and maturity begins it is—23—the skiddoo age of extreme youth and irresponsibility. If a girl isn't a woman by then she will be a goose to the end of the chapter.

After that mystic line is passed she becomes a young woman, a middle-aged woman and an old woman, but she is never a girl again, because she has seen the wheels of the world go round; she has eaten of the tree of knowledge; she has begun to cut her wisdom teeth on the rubber ring of life.

The Real Line

THERE is no arguing, however, on when a girl ceases to be a girl and becomes a woman, for a woman is as old as she looks to the world and as young as she feels. These two opinions seldom agree.

Therefore you see women who, to the unsympathetic observer, seem to need no chaperon but their years and their faces who will not stir without their doors unless under the wing of a married woman and who are always speculating about whether a girl could do this or a girl could do that.

Who is the Solomon to decide the problem under such conditions? Certainly a woman of thirty-five who thinks she is still a girl needs some sort of a guardian, and maybe she is an ingenue.

Generally speaking, a woman ceases to be a girl when she discovers the first gray hair, when she begins to read the recipes for massaging wrinkles out of the corners of her eyes; when she begins to consider her digestion instead of her appetite; when she thinks more of a man's ability to make a living than she does of the way he makes love; when she begins to prefer useful presents to pretty trifles; when she begins to think of society as a hunting ground instead of a picnic place on which to disport herself.

These are the inward signs of the outward graces of having arrived at the age of intelligence.

A woman is foolish not to recognize them and to continue to cling to a pretence that deceives nobody but herself.

Age is a foe only to the women who have not enough sense to make it a friend.

Heaven's Sovereign saves all beings but himself
That hideous sight—a naked human heart.
